Forecast For Scotland
Issued by Met Office Aberdeen
at 0400 on Tuesday 09 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Cold with snow showers pushing in from the east.

Today:
Snow showers will continue to feed in from the east throughout the day. These will affect the north, east and through the Central Belt. Largely dry and fine elsewhere in the west. Feeling very cold.

Tonight:
The snow showers will continue to push in from the east through this evening and overnight, gradually clearing from the far north by morning. Widespread overnight frost.

Wednesday:
Showers will mainly become confined to the southeast of the country, along with the Northern Isles, during the day tomorrow. Dry and fine elsewhere.

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Largely dry and fine, but cold, during Thursday and Friday. Cloudier on Saturday with the chance of snow pushing in from the west. Winds picking up.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.